

I'm against any further de-regulation of broadcast media ownership rules. It's a bad idea and it will hurt consumers and their communities. Frankly I don't even like the fact that cable companies can own broadcast networks and cable networks that other systems need to carry. It's a conflict of interest.

The further consolidation and homogenization of news and entertainment will lead to a subjective and corrupt dissemination of information available to the highest bidder. It will also greatly diminish, if not eliminate local news and reporting over the airwaves.

The whole thing stinks!

James Hebert
Bethel, CT